Two courses of study which develop common responses and integrate the specific sensibilities and methods of each field.

The research

ESAA's commitment to art and the restoration of ecological heritage are at the heart of the school's project.

It develops its research activities through creative workshops as well as during colloquia organised annually.

The second cycle (M1 and M2) is organised around research-creation workshops (creation option) and around the DNSEP study object (conservation-restoration option). Cross-disciplinary seminars and professionalization modules are also part of the curriculum.
